"Let's start by pointing out that we're not talking about a bad neighborhood. We're talking about a bad system. It's a system that we've built that we're building on top of the architecture of the system. What we're building is a system that is designed to keep people who are living in the hood from being able to move out. The system is designed to keep people who are living in the hood from being able to move out. The system is designed to keep people who are living in the hood from being able to move out."

Urban Myth No. 9:
Somebody told her somebody said
we live in the hood.
